It is an Australian Government requirement for the company to annually provide National Pollution Inventory (NPI) data. The NPI is calculated using methodology stipulated by the NPI <http://www.npi.gov.au/>. The NPI numbers are not compared against any air quality criteria.

Emissions from the Birkenhead plant are monitored and regularly tested by an independent accredited body and the results are reported to the EPA in line with our licence requirements. The emissions are modelled for ground level concentrations and benchmarked against relevant health standards stipulated in our EPA licence. Results of ground level concentrations modelling has consistently shown Adelaide Brighton Cement's Birkenhead plant emissions to be significantly below relevant health guidelines and the National Environment Protection Measures
